

Academic Year 2023-2024

Eligible Courses for the Secondary Concentration in European History, Politics, and Societies (EHPS)

*Please note: While we make every effort to identify all eligible EHPS classes, this list may not be exhaustive; additionally, some classes included here are not taught every year. If you identify or have taken a class which is not on the list below, but is focused on modern Europe (post 1750), please contact the CES Program Manager. The aim of the EHPS secondary is to provide students the opportunity to develop a coherent slate of interdisciplinary coursework that is tailored to their interests.

In addition to these courses, students may count one intermediate or advanced European language class, and one European Harvard summer study abroad credit, toward the secondary.

For a complete list of requirements for the EHPS secondary, please see the CES website.

We encourage students to formally declare the EHPS secondary field in my.Harvard as soon as possible so that they may fully benefit from EHPS advisors and related CES opportunities, and to develop a plan for completing the field's requirements.
